40 and 10 Entertainers to Appear Tonight

Twenty acts of comedy and intricate dance routines will be the feature of the minstrel show to be presented by the "Forty and Ten" alumni in the Rex auditorium this evening. "Mistresses of Minstrelsy" will boast a cast of 75 young men who will carry out the female as well as the male necessities of the production.

Under the leadership of Donald McKinley and John Hickson, co-directors, the show is one of the most unique to be presented in Lowell. The players are all well known local young men, several of whom will be remembered through their abilities in the sporting world of local circles.

James Keegan, who will act as the master of ceremonies, is a young man well known in younger set circles. In past productions he has proved himself most capable of carrying out the detailed duties of the master of ceremonies, and his capabilities promise to present themselves in this evening's show.

Dancing will follow the production and will continue until a late hour, with music furnished by a well known local orchestra.
