Textile Section of A. S. M. E. Active

The Executive Committee of the Textile Division of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers is about to devote to the public this year the latest developments in the textile industry, giving a great deal of time and thought to this presentation.

During the last few days the Chairman, Mr. James W. Cox, Jr., consulting engineer, of New York, has given three very interesting talks. The first was given at Aiken, South Carolina, on January 30th. A thoroughgoing appreciation of about a hundred persons was present, and Mr. Cox's efforts were well received.

On January 31st Mr. Cox spoke at Holyoke, Massachusetts, before one of the largest audiences which has recently gathered in Western Massachusetts to hear a talk of this kind. The meeting held at the Hotel National, was held under the auspices of the Western Massachusetts Section of the A. S. M. E.

Jarek Shines In Second Defeat of Season

The Northeastern Drop had a heartbreaking start to their season at the hands of the Huskies. The game started out with a bang as two Husky goals put Northeastern behind early. The Huskies continued their dominance of the game for most of the first half, with a score of 26-12 at the half.

Next Trip To, Or From EDEN!

(From the Concord Monitor)

Many non-locals and local textile workers are being called, says the current bulletin, to review the need for textile jobs in the area. It is expected that there will be more people in the area looking for textile jobs.

SPECIAL ISSUES COMING

In accordance with the usual custom, the text will be turned over to the President class for action in the near future. Under Prof. Dorr's supervision, a board will be selected by the members of that class from among those following which will gather and decide matters for which it is known as the "Proctoring Text." The date March 15th has been set aside for this.

The practice of publishing a selected "Proctoring Text" is also to continue this year, and those ministrations will make its appearance immediately following in the form of "Proctoring Text." The student body is required to continuerelate it with the text, which are usually numerous in early. As that which will be noted at the end of the first half to the half of the deficit of Chipper and Robertson. They were both closely fought by the visitors and both teams were strong. The second half saw a tape in the defense of the visitors, after Textile had shown its presence with a quartet of fine shots. Capt. Logan was responsible for three of them.

Textile apples Upsala "Les" Logan in Fine Form

Capt. Logan finally shook off the shooting jinx that had been with him for the far season and was the one of the evening. Robertson and four visits from the floors and four successful sixties were the high scores, but Logan came across with his which they were needed most. The well advertised defensive work by Cotton, Alford and Robertson certainly saved the game, particularly in the last half, when their combined efforts prevented Upsala from getting close to Textile with the fact that new reserves were rushed forth in a lastminute effort to overwhelm the defense.

Purifoy, the Lowel. For Upsala, Purifoy started out to be the big noise of the evening, but after a threatening five where he was killed two seconds, he was carefully watched and never threatened after the first five minutes of play. Low played a steady defensive game and was always a factor in the low scores, for he refused to make those that looked true.

EDITORIALS

We have heard a good deal recently concerning the suspension not long ago of four members of the CLARK MONTHLY editorial board. According to THE NEW STUDENT, they were dropped from college because of an obscure one-act play which appeared in that publication. According to another source of information, which we consider authentic, the play in question never got beyond the proof-reading stage. While the students' bodies may have demanded an explanation from the college authorities, as well as the reinstatement without loss of credit of the suspended writers, and may have given them a vote of confidence, this action came about not so much because the undergraduates considered the play to be unacceptable, but more because they realized faculty censorship where faculty censorship was supposed to be entirely absent. It seems that unknown to them, their publication has been under the watchful eye of the authorities for some time, but this is apparently the first time they have transgressed.

The press gave the affair all the more notoriety through paupers. The students held their meetings behind closed doors, and refused to see newspaper representatives. It happened, however, as one might well have predicted, that there were undergraduates only too glad to sell accounts of their own writing to the publications deeming them, and thus of course frustrated any attempt on the part of those most concerned with the protest toward keeping the matter from the public eye.

Somehow, a "bull session" on examinations always leads to a discussion of the honor system, and the consensus of opinion seems to be that it would be highly objectionable. Most of those with whom we have discussed it agree that they would pledge themselves not to resort to dishonest means in passing their examinations, but they all balk at the idea of pledging themselves to report any man whom they observed to be "cribbing." This attitude is not at all surprising, when we consider the stigma that has always been attached to a "snooper," no matter who he is and even if his intentions have been the best.

It begins to look as though the Class of 1928 would be the first to graduate from the Lowell Textile Institute. We consider the fact that there was no voice raised in protest at the hearing last Thursday to be a good omen.

However, while having graduated from the Lowell Textile Institute rather than from the Lowell Textile School may make it easier for the graduate to secure the kind of employment he desires, it will not make it any easier for him to maintain his position. Should the proposed name change go through, it is up to the men who will graduate from now on to prove that the change was in keeping with the type of education provided by this institution.

Some call it mellowness...

Soon say that Camel is the mellower cigarette ever made. Some say that it's mild and smooth. It's really all good things in one, and that is why it is supreme upon the pinnacle of modern favor. Camel's popularity today is the largest that any cigarette ever had.

And, it costs something to make this kind of a smoke. It costs the choicest tobaccos that money can buy, and a blending that takes neither time nor expense. Each Camel cigarette is as full of value as the world of tobacco can give.

You can be sure of smoking pleasure, sense and full, in these quality cigarettes. Smoke all of them you want; they simply never tire the taste.

The newsletter of the house certainly has improved upon its truth of the statement that freshmen are elevens. How can they be tenants and still be levies on us.

Our noted "bridge impressively" was at the house other night, and his feet, with a severely deck of cards, are still being discussed.

At last one evidently devoted social committee has come to life, and the numerous engagements they are carrying on is a sign of a good deal of our time.

During the past two weeks, the house has been as quiet as a sanctuary or a graveyard at midnight. Happy-studies and--

HARRINGTON '31 ADDS TO TRACK LAURELS

Dick Harrington, freshman track star, has again come into the limelight as a performer on the baseball team of the local high school for which he has been selected as a partner without peer among New England schoolboys when he graduated from his class. Recently he was prevailed upon to join the A. A. and his work since won him a place on the Unite, minor, minor team in the baseball A. A. against the New York City Treats last Thursday evening. Running lead-off man against the New York and Dominion A. A. teams, he proved the star at the bat and held the field all the way to send his man away to home. A. A. vs. 9-A. C. with the New York A. A. second.

The very good freshman is improving. He has just learned that a beer kist is not something you try to run off your beaten path.

Grid Course At Tufts

Coach Art Hammond of Tufts, who is in the best of student's football and basketball form, has announced that Tufts will meet Harvard in an October series of football games and that Coach Bill M. of St. John's will act as co-coordinator with Professor during the course which will start on October 29 and end on November 5.

The instructions will be for all those advanced in football, including those already selected as school or college with no limits or limits to take up this work.

"We hope to get the whole season's football instruction packed in to these 12 days," said Hammond. "It is a case of building these days up to get the most essential of the time. We will deal with the methods and plays that are used by the most successful teams in the country and their systems of organization and practice."

There will be a tour of this for the coming season. This is the lowest priced for the extensive hours of studying the text of the underlying.

Textile Outlook Improved

The price trend of textiles was favorable the past two months and we are encouraged to think that better conditions will continue into the fall and winter months. The textile industries have been cutting back in order to maintain prices at present levels. The demand for rayon and silk is strong and the supply is limited. The manufacturers are not taking delivery of new goods and the price of rayon is expected to go higher.

Silk Consumption Continues Heavy

The demand for raw silk is still strong and the price is expected to continue at the present level. The demand for raw silk is higher than in previous years and the supply is limited. The manufacturers are not taking delivery of new goods and the price of raw silk is expected to go higher.

I’ve kept that schoolgirl couple one
I’ve walked a mile for a sip.
I’ve asked the man who owns one.
And he tells me he keeps it brake;
I know that child can play it.
To guard the danger line I try,
I know when it’s time to retire.
And I’m heard that they satisfy;
But there is one thing that bothers me.
All through my lifetime I’ve tried
I’d like to know just whether or not
I’m one of the few out of five.

"Well," said Julie, "don’t kill my ardor, and even the sons can’t stretch his own hand and bless it?"

"Don’t worry about that, Julie," said Max,

Robinson’s scoring was assisted, however,

Coach for 1928

Show Selected

After a good deal of deliberation, the Executive Committee of the Lowell Textile Players have chosen Mr. W. O. Purdas, as professional coach for their 1928 pro-season, which is to be given in the Lowell Municipal Auditorium on Friday, April 13th. Mr. Purdas is by no means a "dark horse" to the Players, his efforts with "Hop Tadpole" in 1926, "A Fair of Blazes" in 1927, and "Bluebell" in 1928 have been highly successful.

As yet this year’s vehicle has not been decided upon, though the committee expects to be able to report definitely in this connection in the near future.
