PHI PSI
Gemma Chapter of Phi Psi was founded at the Lowell in the fall of this year and is entering its second postwar year. In 1943, most of the activities were forced and the chapter was quite inactive. In June of 1946, the chapter had a rush of twelve men who were the core of this organization and last year we had about seven (seven) living there. This year the chapter has a core of many people and is not more lively, but is nothing to compare with the present situation.

INTERFRATERNITY COUNCIL
At the October 8 meeting of the Interfraternity Council, the problems of rushing were put up for discussion. As out. As all I.T.L. men (except the freshmen) know, rushing is the time when the Textile students start contacting professional firms of first year's, in order to get busy with the student Group and to become more capable in choosing prospective professional firms. The council also discussed the organization of the rush season also gives us a chance to express our interest in this time, and to see their ads in the "TEXT." If you do this, it will prove to them the value of their advertisement in our paper. It will help us a lot. Thank you, Phil.

APOLOGIES to Prof. S. and Prof. Hassler who were mistranscribed as to Mr. in last issue. We must be more careful.

Teniers Drop Grid Openers

Potentially in their resuming market Lowell and Antioch, 1947 Inter- collegiate gridiron wars at the end of the season were set for action owing to several factors. The victory at the hands of Antioch resulted in the tri-umphant debut of the Gridiron League.

In a rare show of energy, the Teniers staged a gridiron game and defeated the Antiochers by a 6-0 margin, thus cementing their position in the league.

The Teniers' victory resulted from the combined efforts of their forwards and backs, led by the outstanding performance of Senior John Smith, who scored the only touchdown of the game. The Teniers' defense was solid, holding the Antioch offense to just one first down in the entire game.

The Teniers' successful season continued with a dominating victory over the Antioch Tigers, further solidifying their position in the league and setting the stage for their upcoming games.
