LOWELL, May 2 — The beautiful almond blossoms of spring are in full bloom in the area for the annual Pickout banquet downtown. The festivities, which were attended by many alumni, included a dinner at the hotel and a tour of local attractions.

L.T.I., May 2 — The American Institute of Architects held its annual banquet on Thursday evening. The event was attended by many local architects and business leaders. The keynote speaker was a well-known architect who discussed the latest trends in architecture.

L.T.I., May 2 — The National Student Council met last week to discuss the future of the student council. The students were concerned about the lack of diversity in the student council and the lack of involvement from the general student population.

THE TEXT

BY JOEL G. GRIFFIN

HIGH C. IN THE TYPICOLOR

“The Tales of Hoffmann” is about the finest musical film ever made. It is a perfect musical film in every way, and the acting and direction of the cast are incomparable. The music is beautiful, and the story is well told.

PROLOGUE

It is 1885. The opera is being performed in Paris. The audience is captivated by the music and the story. The stars of the opera are Napoleonic, Rossini, Weber, and Weber’s wife, who is the mother of the opera’s hero, Hoffmann.

TECHNIQUE

The opera is performed in Technicolor, which adds a new dimension to the film. The colors are vivid and real, and the lighting is perfect. The costumes are beautifully designed, and the sets are magnificent.

CAST

Hoffmann (played by Richard Burton) is the hero of the opera. He is a painter, and he is also a poet. He is a romantic, and he is a dreamer. He is a man of many talents, and he is a man of many sorrows.

SOPHIE

Sophie (played by Moira Shearer) is Hoffmann’s beloved. She is beautiful, and she is sweet. She is Hoffmann’s muse, and she is Hoffmann’s love. She is Hoffmann’s everything.

FRANZ

Franz (played by Richard Attenborough) is Hoffmann’s friend. He is a painter, and he is also a poet. He is a romantic, and he is a dreamer. He is a man of many talents, and he is a man of many sorrows.

JACQUES

Jacques (played by Jean Marais) is Hoffmann’s rival. He is a painter, and he is also a poet. He is a romantic, and he is a dreamer. He is a man of many talents, and he is a man of many sorrows.

SPORTSMEN
By GERALD BARRY

The announcement that Lowell Textile will have an extra strength in intercollegiate football this year, as well as the departure of several upperclassmen, has already been made. The team will be in full swing next week when the Massachusetts Institute of Technology visits Lowell on the 9th.

The Textile football squad has a new look this year, with several new players added to the roster. The team will be under the direction of Coach John M. Keene, who has been with the school for 10 years.

L.T.J.—Phil Philp was chosen to the final rink last Wednesday with a 13-2 victory over the UMass. Philp's play was outstanding, with several long drives and a strong defense. The Textiles have won their last two games by a combined score of 21-3.

SEAT KEENE TEACHERS, LOVE TO NEW ENGLAND IN OVERTIME

L.T.J.—May—After defeating Carney and Clark to open the season, Randy Tabony's rink moved into the championship game on Saturday against New England. Randy's team, which has been unbeaten for three years, scored a convincing 6-4 victory over L.T.J. The match was held at the Hotel St. Francis in Boston.

TEXTILE BANKS CLARK UNIVERSITY

WORCESTER, April 13 — Behind Earl Green's terrific three-hitter, L.T.J.'s Terraces gathered in another season's winning of the infant artes. Earl Green, who was plucked from the team during the spring season, pitched a one-hitter and allowed only four hits, including one home run.

Frank Polak Stars

The Holy Cross golf team returning from a southern trip last week, which compiled a fine record on their return to the local meet, was defeated by New England in a match at the YMCA in August.

The outcome of the match, as far as Textile's side of the ledger, was the victory of Frank Polak's great over the team's other, less experienced players. This victory was more than anticipated, as Polak's achievements during the season were considered by many to be the most outstanding of any on Textile's other side as he took the lead in the early rounds of the Holy Cross. Other Textile players were R. W. Strong, G. H. Haughton, and E. D. G. Whipple, while the Green's team included T. C. Campbell, J. A. Brown, and A. H. T. R. Clark, the Athletic Director's pick for the championship meets.

The following are the final results of the matches:

New England 6
L.T.J. 4

A week ago, L.T.J.'s Terraces were ranked as the best team in the country, having won their last two games by a combined score of 21-3.

CAMPUS COMMENTS

By Bob Freeman

In this issue of THE TEXT, I would like to reprise parts of an article from the Intracalgallic Press by Dr. Oratley Tead, Chairman of the Board of Alumni Education at New York City, who outlined the faults of college teaching.

College teachers, he declared, should guard against what he termed their "irrelevant occupational hazards." He advocated "to clearly define the distinction between hours of work and hours of instruction" of college teachers by providing them with offices away from their homes.

He further deplored the fact that, in the result of classes, the majority of college teachers "have primarily talked." Dr. Tead stated, "They merely tell others. They are sure that college teaching is the teaching of facts. They dispense words and many words. It sometimes seems as if many college classes are conducted on the principle that the printing press and the mimeograph machine are insufficient." In this respect, younger college teachers, he remarked, certainly have the falling of "triumph's to stimulate their favorite professor, with little or no thought given to the sins of education or the methods by which these sins may be realized."

Dr. Tead said what he described as "the passion for objectivity and a kind of intellectual mistrust" which some college teachers adopt. "Failure to realize that two distinct but supplementary aims should be held in view seems the reason for this attitude," he declared. "It is merely better education for the teacher to admit that, at the least, he is destined by a passion for truth-seeking."

"Education is for you," he asserted. "It is to enable students to cope with the problem situations of conduct and of aspiration. Neither extreme individualism nor a complete non-comitement is the desired prerequisite."

He further warned that the college teachers are not safe in assuming that "the desire to learn is spontaneously possessed and dominant." To ignore the problem of the student's desire to learn, he said, is "failing to take account of the primary condition of carrying learning to completion." For "the failure of teachers, a searching understanding of the learning process would have to appear a complete revamping of their methods of dealing with subject matter with greater importance to their profession."

Basiclly, it is only those people with the initiative and intelligence who will gather in halls of learning. With this thought in mind the writer of this article realizes that only those with college education will obtain it. Of greater importance, it will obtain it through their own resources and methods.

The lesson then revolves around the thought, why should individuals be literally forced through archaic designs to attend classes if they can obtain the equal amount of knowledge through non attending classes, usable. Page 4, Sections 6-6-7-8 of the Student Rules and Regulations concerning absences, was obviously (as it seems to me) designed in order to regulate the amount of costs for those of the Freeman and Sophomore.

Love in Blows

The young lover was obviously in love with the beautiful young girl at his side. Those soft lovely hands were whispered, "What those beautiful eyes! Where did you get such beauty?"

The girl answered, unprompted, "I came with the hand.

"Are you sure you can do and be one arm?"

"Sure!"

The Lorain Lorain College Action

A poor German, a relative of John Jacob Astor, once applied for charity. Mr. Astor gave him a five-dollar bill and said, "You can just make it out the way...

"You mean, you can make it?" said the stripling astounded. "The boy has a rich imagination.

Dean Rodd is an extremely warm-voiced speaker, always full of personal secietary. One day on campus, a friend pointed to a flock of sheep grazing in the field. "Look, those sheep have just been sheared," he said.

The Dean replied the flock. "Shorned on the side, anyway", he admitted.

A tomboyish is what you go to do the things you want to do."

"It's just human nature,” he concluded.

Crime and Clues to protect those who are not afraid... and by this I mean you."

Obviously, those who are in the lower undergraduate classes deserve such harsh treatment to insure that they maintain proper class attendance. For Julians and Seniors, however, this section is completely unimportant. If an individual feels that his age and advanced standing, with respect to class, can now miss a class or even a sequence of classes without due harm being done to his status, he is at liberty to make any offer by his own faculties.

Primarily, the whole function of education (or as I have been led to believe) is to encourage free thought and beliefs with a minimum of restrictions. For it is only with those free convictions that we can hope to开发建设建立一种自由的民主制度。" Conversely, it would seem that methods here are truly unimportant. We are being forced into obeying rules and regulations that should have been brought up to date years ago.

Education, which should be the source of better citizens through their experiences, is not at all in evidence. Seniors and Julians alike are required to present notes explaining (assuming would be the proper word) their actions of missing a class. Members of the freshmen and the administration should (even though it be 1951) grant that these individuals have a mind mature enough to realize the full scope of their actions, without submitting them to an imposition of forms and red tapes.

Inauguration Day June 2

The first presidential inauguration in the history of the institute will be held on the afternoon of June 2, 1951

Leading educators of New England will be present in full academic colors.

The inaugiral address will be delivered by Kenneth R. Fox, now associated with Burlington Mills.

No tickets will be issued for the inauguration and everyone is invited to attend.

Guests in a Coast hotel, bearing a scorch in the corridor, discovered a dentist in negligees being pursued by a gentleman who was, in effect, noted. Later it developed that the impromptu Ramos was an English major, who was promptly court-martialed. His lawyer was hired an acquittal, however, by virtue of the following paragraph in the army manual: "It is not compulsory for an officer to wear a uniform at all times, so long as he is suitably garbed for the sport in which he is engaged.

THE TEXT

The government has taken the text of the following story and has placed it on the page. The story is about a textile mill worker who is involved in a dispute with his employer. The text is written in a formal style and includes legal terminology and references to case law.

In Case of Need

A textile mill worker has been involved in a dispute with his employer over the terms of his employment. The worker, who has worked at the mill for over 10 years, was recently refused a raise and was threatened with termination. He is represented by counsel and is seeking damages and back wages.

The Case

The textile mill is located in a small town in the midwest and is one of the largest employers in the area. The worker, who has been employed at the mill for over 10 years, was recently refused a raise and was threatened with termination. He is represented by counsel and is seeking damages and back wages.

The Worker's Complaint

The worker claims that his employer, the textile mill, has violated his rights under the federal labor laws. He argues that the mill has refused to pay him the wages he is entitled to and has failed to provide him with adequate overtime pay.

The Employer's Defense

The employer argues that the worker's claims are without merit and that the mill has followed all applicable labor laws. The employer also argues that the worker has a history of旷工 and that his performance has been poor.

The Outcome

The case is currently pending in court and a decision is expected soon. Both sides are represented by experienced labor attorneys and are preparing for a lengthy trial.
